The stables, managed by Larry Waltz, have been on the Johnson Hills Park property for 16 years.

The Park District, however, recently ordered the stables to vacate the property by July 1.

Anderson Township resident Marianne Ehemann, who boards her horse Ruby at Bridle Run Stables, said the stables are a unique aspect of the community.

"I think they've completely underestimated what it's taking away from Anderson Township," she said of the park district's decision.

Ehemann said her children, along with many others, head to Bridle Run Stables for summer camp or riding lessons and she's upset they will no longer have that opportunity.

Ken Kushner, executive director of the park district, said once the stables are gone, they can look at preliminary development plans for Johnson Hills Park.

"We didn't buy (the property) for a stabling operation," he said.

"It's going to take a lot of money and a lot of time, but we do know that we have to make the land into a public park."

Kushner added that they're currently working on engineering plans for an access road, parking lot and infrastructure improvements.

Resident Sheryl Hight, who boards her horse Cookie at the stables, said she likes the natural feel of Johnson Hills Park and would like it to stay that way.

"This place is back-to-basics and it's a peaceful place," she said.

"I don't look at Bridle Run as a business, I'm looking at it as something I have invested in park-wise and personally."

Kushner said the stables bring in close to $20,000 each year and the park district could reintroduce a scaled-down equine facility in the future.

"There is a lot of history and heritage there and we want to make sure we make the right moves," he said.

Help decide

The Anderson Township Park District is forming an advisory committee to help with the future development of Johnson Hills Park.

Waltz said previously that he will build new stables in Batavia.
